

YOUNG PRODUCERS COUNCIL TO MEET THIS SUMMER

The USPB established the Young Producers Council (YPC) in 2016 to connect and educate young men and women with ties to USPB, offering them a deeper understanding of the company's operations.

Many current USPB members became involved in their 30s and 40s, and today, young producers are increasingly contributing to decisions on the marketing of finished cattle. The talent, skills and leadership shown by past YPC members indicate that the future of the beef industry is in capable hands.

On August 6-7, 2025, YPC participants will have the opportunity to visit the National Beef facility in Dodge City, Kansas, to hear from plant personnel about company operations. The group will reconvene in November for a tour of company operations in the Kansas City area.

Dominic Stephens, manager of Beef Belt Feeders in Scott City, Kansas, has participated in the YPC and shares his insights on class participation in this video.

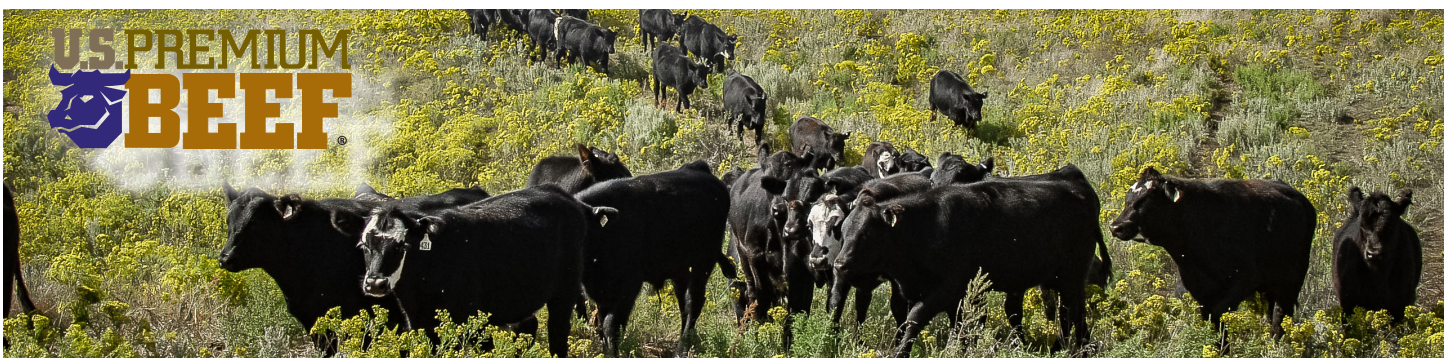

For consideration in the upcoming class, please send a prospective candidate's name and contact information to uspb@uspb.com or contact Tracy Thomas or Brian Bertelsen at 866-877-2525. ♦

**“
I learned a lot, and have an elevated appreciation for the industry.

— Dominic Stephens, Beef Belt Feeders

”

A PRODUCER-OWNED BEEF COMPANY

Ownership | Market Access | Value Based Pricing | Information Transfer